STAMP & COIN

COLLECTOR'S CORNER

by GEORGE ALLARD

PAPUA AND NEW GUINEA.

Flora and Fauna Series

Beautiful Birds of Paradise are featured on a set of four stamps in the new "flora and fauna" series. Most people do not realize that there are numerous species of this gorgeous creature. Each stamp in the series displays a different one.

The King of Saxony, on the 5¢ value, is a small bird with a long head and facial decoration. The bizarre head feathers, which grow to 18 or 19 inches in length, are currently traded for $30 in the territory. The Little King (10¢ value), is only about six inches long but has two elongated wire-like tail feathers that end about six inches from the body in two brilliant iridescent emerald green circular flags. The Count Raggi (15¢ value) is known by its orange plumes which flow from underneath the wings to double the size of the bird. The Sickle-crested (25¢ value) lives in the mountains at 7500 to 11,500 feet elevation.

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH TO HONOR RED CROSS

For those who collect stamps pertaining to the "Red Cross" . . . it has been announced that the British Red Cross Society has called upon all countries where it operates to issue commemorative stamps in honor of its centenary. The Red Cross is active throughout the British Commonwealth, so there will be many interesting stamps and sets issued for the collector.

RHODESIA

As announced by the Minister of Posts, the definitive decimal stamps issued by the Smith regime in Rhodesia are not valid for the prepayment of mail. —

The Post Office has advised that these stamps are invalid because their issue has no legal basis. Mail bearing these stamps will therefore be unpaid. The treatment of unpaid or underpaid mail from abroad is regulated by international agreement — the Acts of the Universal Postal Union, which require stamps used in prepayment of postage to be valid in the country of origin.

ROUNDHOUSE ROUNDUP

"Zawww!" Papacito was hard at work at his favorite task, sleeping in a hammock between two shady trees. His sleep was rudely interrupted when Little Pancho Vanilla came dashing up to him in alarm.

"Papacito! Papacito!" Pancho panted. "Wake up, queek! A railroad boxcar carrying a beeg bool has rolled from the tracks and the bool has escaped!"

"Huh? What?" Papacito yawned sleepily. "A beeg boxcar has escaped from a bool?"

"I told the conductor that my Papacito was the most famous boolfighter in all of Chiviania and would be glad to catch the bool," Little Pancho added.

Papacito yawned and stretched again. "That ees fine, Little Pancho," he nodded. "You told the conductor that I would... I would WHAT?" Papacito was suddenly wide awake. "I you want to catch thees bool?"

"Si, Papacito," Little Pancho nodded.

"But-but-but," Papacito stammered fearfully. "Uh, I mean, bools are out of season now. Si, that ees right." Papacito bobbed his head. "So therefore I cannot catch heem and eel go back to sleep... I mean work."

But before Pancho had a chance to lie down again, Little Pancho had grabbed him by the arm and was hurrying him to the railroad yard. A huge crowd had gathered.

"Come quickly, señor," the train conductor pleaded. "The bool has run down the tracks toward the roundhouse."

Papacito's eyes rolled from side to side and he wished that he could be safely back in his hammock. But upon seeing Little Pancho looking at him so proudly, he knew that he must face the bull.

"Everybody stand back!" he ordered bravely. "I go now to capture thees ferocious bool."

He strutted bravely down the tracks, but his heart almost stopped beating when suddenly the bull appeared before him and there was no place left to hide.

The great, glowering bull lowered his head and charged. Papacito lowered his own head and charged... in the other direction.

"What are you doing?" the train conductor called as Papacito whizzed past him.

"I am leading heem to a safe place for capture so nobody weel get hurt," Papacito panted. "Especially me," he added under his breath.

"Turn around and head for the roundhouse," the conductor called. "When you are both inside, we weel close the doors."

Papacito did as he was advised, and soon he and the bull were inside the roundhouse and the conductor had closed the doors.

"Yikes! I'm trapped!" Papacito shouted with alarm as he kept on running.

Around and around and around the roundhouse the bull chased Papacito. But in a few minutes the bull became so dizzy that he fell to the ground in a faint.

Papacito, who was more frightened than dizzy, immediately grabbed a rope and tied the bull up safely.

"Open the doors," he called to the conductor. "I have captured the bool."

"How did you ever do it?" the conductor asked later as the people lifted Papacito to their shoulders and cheered.

"Oh, eet was nothing," Papacito panted modestly. "I just went about eet een a round-about way!"

AT LAST... COMES THE DAY OF THE CONTEST...

YOUR FUTURE

© 1970 BY WESTERN PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.

As an OCEANOGRAPHER

Exciting voyages to the bottom of the sea could become part of your work schedule if you choose to become an oceanographer! Using the principles of natural sciences, mathematics, and engineering, and employing special instruments, you would study the characteristics, movements, physical properties, and plant and animal life of the seas.

Most oceanographers specialize in one of the many branches of oceanography, such as biological, chemical, physical, or geological. Some are marine meteorologists, who study the processes by which the weather over the sea is generated. Others are oceanographic engineers and electronic specialists, who design and build systems and devices used in sea research, many working in private industry.

To become an oceanographer, you must be a college graduate, with at least a bachelor's degree with a major in oceanography, biology, mathematics, engineering, or one of the basic sciences. You must have a natural curiosity, a liking for the sciences and for detail work.

Because the importance of the oceans to the world's welfare has not been fully recognized until recently, oceanographers find exciting new fields opening up for them constantly, with very good pay.

As an INTERIOR DESIGNER AND DECORATOR

Through the magic of colors and materials, you will transform mere rooms and buildings into attractive convenient homes and offices, if you choose to become an interior designer and decorator. You will plan the arrangement and functional use of space and coordinate the furniture, floor coverings, drapes, lamps, and other accessories.

Some decorators and designers work on the interiors of ships and airplanes, and some design stage sets used for movies and television. Many are employed by large department and furniture stores, advising customers on decorating and designing, and some have positions with restaurant and hotel chains. Others work for architects, manufacturers of interior furnishings, or home-furnishing publications.

To become an interior designer and decorator, you must complete a course of two or three years at a recognized art school or institute or you must earn a bachelor's degree in college, with a major in designing and decorating. You must have artistic talent, imagination, good business judgment, and the ability to deal with people.

This field offers a variety of exciting areas of work. Salaries are generally good; and for the truly talented, there is no limit!
